ORDER ON MOTION OF BANK DEFENDANTS TO MODIFY DEPOSITION PROTOCOL

After a long and contentious series of negotiations, the parties agreed to a deposition protocol to govern the taking of depositions in the Enron bankruptcy case and the civil Enron cases. On March 11, 2004, these Courts signed a Deposition Protocol Order (DPO) to implement that agreement. On November 2, 2004, the Bank Defendants filed a detailed motion to modify the DPO, citing numerous instances in which the DPO did not serve its intended purpose and suggestions for changes that would correct the deficiencies of the DPO. (Instrument No. 2552) Although all parties concede that the DPO as written is not perfect, virtually all of the parties agree that the DPO should remain in place.

The judges of the two Courts have conferred and have determined that an oral hearing on this matter is not necessary. The judges are in agreement that, given the comprehensive nature of the DPO, the reluctance of most of the parties to change the DPO, and the fact that, after extensive negotiations, all parties agreed to the DPO, the DPO should not be changed at this time. It would be unwise to change the plan of battle in the middle of the campaign. If, in fact, it should occur that the Bank Defendants are not able to take depositions they need, the DPO can be modified at that time. The Courts encourage the parties to continue to co-operate in an effort to make the DPO work better for all parties and to negotiate agreed changes when possible. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED, ADJUDGED, and DECREED that the Bank Defendants' Motion to Amend the Deposition Protocol Order is hereby DENIED.

Signed at Houston, Texas this 14th day of December, 2004.
